DATE: May 28, 2021

SUMMARY:

The Cultural Competency Project Team is charged with the following tasks:

> Develop a definition and vision for cultural competency > Assess the College s

tools that are necessary to identify and call out unconscious bias and racist practices. Culturally competent individuals also take personal responsibility to employ equity minded practices within their areas of responsibility and their circle of influence, in order to eliminate racism and close equity gaps.

Assessment: The College should rely on ongoing and future campus climate surveys to assess NC s level of cultural competency and training needs (e.g. National Assessment of Collegiate Campus Climates (NACC) and UTEP s Equity Audit). The College should consider using the annual Program Review process to assess cultural competency professional development needs for discipline/departments/ and units.

Training: The following trainings provide the necessary knowledge and tools to address unconscious bias and systemic racism, and create a culture of equity minded practices

> Center for Organizational Responsibility and Advancement (CORA) cours on Dismantling Anti Blackness on Your Campus: Core Competencies for Allies
> CORA s course on Racial Microaggressions
> USC s Center for Urban Education on Concepts and Activities for Racial Equity Work

Implementation: To improve organizational cultural competency, the College should consider developing and implementing a multi-year, Train the Trainer program model to increase employees basic understanding of what it means to be culturally competent. Individuals selected to serve as trainers shall represent all constituent groups so that training is customized to serve the needs of constituent groups and to offer peer training opportunities (e.g. faculty trainers for faculty). It is also recommended that a variety of training options be provided (e.g. online, in person retreats, flex) to maximize the number of employees who complete basic level training. In addition to providing a basic level training, the college should continue to make available higher level training options for employees who want to further their understanding of cultural competency (e.g. CORA certificate courses, USC Race and Equity Center trainings)

RECOMMENDATIONS (for team next year)

A new project team shall be launched next year to work on the development and implementation of a Train the Trainer model. Team members shall be composed of all constituent groups who are also willing to serve as trainers. Team shall also coordinate with ongoing local and districtwide professional development effort and collaborate with professional development committees/groups (e.g. Professional Development Coordinating Network, Faculty Professional Development Committee, Classified Professionals Professional Development Committee, and ASNC). We also recommend to add an objective under EMP Goal 4 (Professional Development) for Cultural Competency training goal.
